A CONVERGENCE OF LEGACY

Pat Summitt didn't just win games. She built a model for what it means to lead with purpose, on the court and in life. Her final act of courage, going public with her Alzheimer's diagnosis to reduce stigma and fund research, was perhaps her most important victory of all.

Ten years later, her legacy is not a memory. It is a movement, and this June, the women's basketball world returns to Knoxville to honor it.

*"She didn't just coach.
She built a blueprint for what legacy looks like."*

This is the weekend where that blueprint comes alive again.

We'd be honored to build this together.
